Description

Abstract Introduction: The aim of this study is to provide a new and practical method known as “nurse trainer” for constant training and ICU and emergency care during their clinical shifts. Method: At first, using a pretest, the knowledge of nurses in emergency units and especially in interpreting arterial blood gases (ABG) and related nursing cares was determined. Then the nurse trainers, having carried out other professional activities, trained and answered the nurses' questions when the unit workload had been lightened and the ...
